

STOP THE PRESS! STOP THE PRESS!

This Pincus Matz & Marquard April Newsletter was just about ready to be sent out, when we met Mrs Madeleine Behrman. We realised that we simply had to include this story. Mrs Behrman is a reader of The Chronicle. When she saw a photo in the community paper of the Pincus Matz & Marquard Easter Egg Collection project, she decided that she would like to make a contribution. Thank you Mrs Behrman, we welcome your generosity. Your heart-warming gesture not only proves that sound marketing and media plans can have far-reaching benefits, but it also complements our commitment to be passionate about people.

Easter Eggs for Jabulani

Melissa Hans (Litigation department), Kerith Chetty (Candidate attorney), Les Masterson (senior partner) and Melanie Wilson (assistant to Les), pose with some of the Easter eggs collected by the partners and staff of Pincus Matz & Marquard. The Easter eggs and items of clothing will be distributed to the children in the paediatric ward in the Zithulele Hospital in the Eastern Cape. Les will take them when he visits his daughter and her family over the Easter period. She and her husband are doctors at the hospital and founders of the Jabulani Rural Health Foundation which supports the hospital and other projects in the area.

Embracing Change

As part of our ongoing commitment to delivery of exceptional service, we recently invited Gary Simons of Change Café to hold a lunchtime workshop in our boardroom. Change is inevitable, both in our personal lives as it is in the work place, and we wanted to learn effective ways to understand and embrace change in a positive and constructive way. We thoroughly enjoyed the session, and look forward to building even stronger relationships by maintaining our efforts and service.

Art Exhibition at Lexus Helderberg

Lexus Helderberg recently invited our very own marketing consultant, Carmen Brander to exhibit her brightly coloured paintings in their showroom in Somerset West. We joined Carmen at the opening and wish her well with the exhibition which runs until 4 May.

Brilliant Blue

At the recent "Brilliant Blue" themed end month party we said good bye to Patrick McKenzie who spent a year with us as a candidate attorney. We will miss him and wish him success and happiness in all spheres of his life.

He is risen - indeed!

We talk to Winnie Zazaza

Winnie is a born and bred Cape Townian and went to school in Gugulethu. She has two children, Siyabulela 19 yrs old and Andile 11 yrs old. Winnie's husband is an entrepreneur who is currently involved in an agricultural venture. Winnie is most proud of being a mom, having a family, running a household and working. She says "I never imagined myself like that - as an independent self-sufficient person. I am very grateful for all these blessings in my life." Working at Pincus Matz & Marquard enables Winnie to balance work and family life as the office is not far from home and her working hours allow her to be at home in the afternoons.

To relax Winnie enjoys reading, especially Christian books, listening to music and, like a typical woman, looks forward to her monthly social gatherings with friends from the neighbourhood. Winnie is an accomplished cook in traditional dishes like stews with meat with vegetables, spinach and pap, and samp and often does catering with her sister and two friends for community functions.

Winnie has been with Pincus Matz & Marquard for four years and especially enjoys interacting with the staff at the office, meeting people, learning new skills and being part of a legal firm - never thinking she would one day work amongst lawyers. Her functions include messenger work, certain administrative chores such as banking, going to the Sheriff's office, Docex and the post office, cleaning and very importantly, coordinating Pincus Matz & Marquard's lunch club.

Winnie sees herself as a reliable, trustworthy, friendly and fun-loving person. She fits right into the Pincus Matz & Marquard ethos and the partners and staff regard Winnie to be an asset to the firm and are proud to call her a valued and well-loved member of the family.
